

PORTFOLIO DEFINITION

Adventurous

The portfolio aims to provide long-term capital growth, adopting a higher risk growth strategy, looking to outperform the equity market. Significant short-term fluctuations in value are likely. It aims to grow the investment above inflation over the long term.

The portfolio is a combination of medium and higher risk investments, with no lower risk investments with the exception of un-invested cash. It is a diversified equity based portfolio.

MARKET UPDATE

Equity markets around the globe briefly declined at the start of August, following the publication of less encouraging US economic data, which raised concerns there is a chance the US may be heading for recession. At the same time, the Bank of Japan announced its biggest increase in interest rates for over 17 years. This added to the volatility as 'carry traders', who borrow in a low-interest rate currency (such as the Japanese Yen) and invest in a higher yielding currency, tried to exit their positions as the Yen strengthened.

Over the rest of the month, most markets recovered much of their lost ground following several developments. This included the Bank of Japan ruling out a further rise in interest rates while markets were volatile. There were also more positive labour market releases as well as data showing that the US service sector returned to growth in July.

The US Federal Open Market Committee did not have a scheduled meeting during August, but it now looks almost certain to start cutting rates in September. The Bank of England did meet in August, where it announced its first cut to interest rates since 2020. Expectations of significant rate cuts helped our bond holdings as well as the Invesco S&P 500 High Dividend Low Volatility ETF (+2.4% over August) as it has a high allocation to 'bond proxy' equity sectors that tend to do well when interest rates fall.

By the end of August, most of the holdings in the portfolio had increased in value. It is pleasing to see that the portfolio held up well against the early bout of volatility, yet still participated in the recovery to end the month with a positive return.
